There are step by step training documentation available in FireDAC documentation for more details like this : You will also need to have Delphi XE4 for iOS as well as iOS Device A: To get the app running you have two choices: Enable in-IDE debugging for iOS apps as described in this blog article; Or run Delphi code on a simulator with the XE FireDAC or TMS components. The last one is what you have tried already and it does not work because Delphi need to build an EXE. A problem for you and I is that you cannot re-use code if you compile it as a full EXE. The iOS simulator does not support to build EXEs and since Delphi XE version it does not have an option to include debug symbols. The only solution is to build it as a package. A package is a ZIP archive containing an EXE (a simple wrapper) and several other DLLs that are located in the same folder. This way Delphi can build the package and the iOS simulator can find the files. This is a good video tutorial that explain in details how to create packages and how to deploy them to the iOS simulator. Republican pundit and former Trump campaign manager Corey Lewandowski will be joining the ranks of Fox News for at least the next quarter, as some of those now in the company's leadership shake out. Lewandowski's departure, which will see him replaced as a contributor by a combination of fellow former Trump campaign advisors Roger Stone and Katrina Pierson, is the latest in a series of firings at Fox that has led many to worry about the network's commitment to the 2018 midterm election. Lewandowski's hire — the first Fox News senior hire of Trump's administration — comes less than a month before Republicans' midterm messaging, which polls show is already struggling. Last week's announcement of a Republican-led Senate is also evidence of the GOP's need to reverse their losses to the Democrats, particularly in the Southern states that have gone blue in recent elections. "Lewandowski's appointment will enable us to continue our focus on the midterms and ensuring that our viewers have a voice for conservative values in the 2018 elections," Fox News head Rupert Murdoch said at the time of Lewandowski's hire. In response to the firing, many have drawn comparisons to the network�
