A variety of types of processing: there are many types and subspecies of them, each of which requires its own technology. Nowadays, thanks to advances in technology, there are many ways to process and differentiate materials. There are such types of work: enamel; powder; thermocasting; vacuum; processing with diamond tools; polishing; grinding. Among the varieties, several types can be distinguished: draft, finishing; paintwork. The materials used in these types also differ: enamel - acrylic and their derivatives; oil; nitrocellulose; polyester; emulsion; liquid and others. The most important step in surface treatment is the use of special tools: Both in technical terms and in terms of design - the choice of roller. Manufacturers offer models in various sizes, and should be based on the expected area of processing. For large rooms, it is better to use a roller with several handles. In this case, you do not have to spend extra energy on mixing. Good rollers are aluminum or steel. They quickly and easily fall on the material. Try to choose a narrow or medium width roller so that you do not have to spend money on additional accessories. On the market there are many models with various types of coverage. Manufacturers offer rollers coated with different layers of varnish. If you prefer a smooth finish, choose a plastic roller. This thin and thin matter is quite effective in work. In order not to damage the surface, at least a distance must be left between the material and the treated surfaces. But, if you want to decorate the coating with pompoms or spikes, rollers with fine bristles are suitable for you. Make sure that you always have special brushes in your arsenal. They will help you treat the damaged surface in time, which will protect it from damage in the future. There are plastic and metal brushes. They are pegs that are embedded in a plastic handle and attached to a special base. This brush must be handled with care. Brushes must be made of foam rubber. Thanks to their use, the quality of surface treatment is improved. If you need professional and not very cheap rollers - ask for their price
