The benefits of joining a healthy church. Week 11 is now in the books! It has been a great month for the Be Fit Kids team. This week, we visited Blessed Sacrament in downtown Grand Rapids. There were a lot of great parts of the service. One aspect of the service stood out in particular. Blessed Sacrament It was clear that Blessed Sacrament has put a lot of thought and planning into being a healthy church. There was a video playing in the balcony about the benefits of being a healthy church. It listed a lot of ways that being a healthy church is both good for the church and good for us. The video was pretty long, but the message was clear and powerful: being a healthy church is about more than a face lift. I did not understand some of the specific benefits until I watched the video, but I had a sense that being a healthy church is about being humble, faithful, and loving. The video highlighted some of the key benefits of being a healthy church. These are: An unhealthy church will eventually struggle with: Who has control and to what degree. Healthy churches recognize that in the long run, who controls things is secondary to what is important in the long run. A healthy church will understand that, while they may want to reign supreme, in the end they should submit to God. A healthy church will seek to be the safest place for people to come, where they can find strength to face the world. A healthy church understands that true safety is a mutual relationship of love and protection. We are called to love our neighbors, and we also need to love ourselves. A healthy church seeks to protect our children and youth. The parish has a high need to minister to the needs of our youth and children. A healthy church will recognize that the pastor's greatest calling is to be a family father and mother. A healthy church will be clear in our understanding of the moral

Mizar Pro 4, Autodesk Relate Pro 2.4 for Photo. A second binational flag being made to support the Cuban Five from visiting Canadian writer Richard Fidler. Fidler, professor of English at the University of British Columbia, and Ottawa-based artist Paul Patoff were in Havana on Thursday, in a two-person delegation to mark the 30th anniversary of a landmark human rights ruling that cleared five Cubans of terrorist-related charges. Photo supplied by Toronto-based activist Eva Marie, a group member on the second binational delegation to Cuba to mark the 30th anniversary of the verdict. The other Canadian, Eva Marie, helped to negotiate the visit for Fidler and Patoff. The Canadian group marked the 30th anniversary of the politically complex July 12 ruling by the Supreme Court of Justice of Cuba, which found five Cubans "guilty of intent to commit terrorist acts, intent to commit the crime of subversion and participation in an organization." The verdict was reached, they said, in a secret session in a binational setting at the Palace of Justice in Havana, which they and their Canadian hosts witnessed. The five defendants, who are now retired from Cuba's military, are Elicer Ávila, Ramón Labañino, René González, Antonio Guerrero, and Fernando González. The Cuban Five, as they have been dubbed, were arrested in May 1998 in Miami. Their trial, at the behest of the government of U.S. President George W. Bush, was a catalyst for a decline in bilateral relations. Fidler noted in his pre-trip report that the mood in Cuba has grown "resilient," with the government able to reduce its economic dependence on the United States as measures to mitigate the damage from the "Special Period" of the 1990s have succeeded. He said that any constructive critique of Cuban governance tends to be set off by counter-criticism of Canada. For years, Cuba had brought charges against six people, five of them Canadian, in connection with the same plot, essentially a case of "conspiracy to commit terrorism." Those accused of espionage activity, in effect, were charged with conspiring to subvert Cuban institutions. The espionage accusation was intended as a handy pretext for the government, which at the time was sorely
