The present invention relates to a novel function-composed electric heating body for use in a cooking oven, etc. U.S. Pat. No. 4,166,813 (corresponding to Japanese Utility Model Publication No. Sho-49-9645) discloses an electric heating body composed of a cylindrical core member having an electric resistance element received therein, and a cylindrical shell member fitted on the core member to cover the electric resistance element. On the outer circumferential face of the core member is attached a heat-resistant film material composed of a thermally soft material such as glass or stainless, etc. at least on the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element. The heat-resistant film material is attached to the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element by heat softening the material at a temperature not lower than the critical temperature (not lower than the softening point) thereof to melt and attach the heat-resistant film material to the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element by surface tension of the melted material. The thus heat-resistant film material is in close contact with the electric resistance element. Thus, the heat-resistant film material does not burn on the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element and is maintained in close contact with the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element as long as it is attached to the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element. The heat-resistant film material which is attached to the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element is exposed to the outside and thus is apt to absorb moisture and be deteriorated due to heat. Thus, the heat-resistant film material must be replaced with new one at regular intervals. U.S. Pat. No. 4,166,813 also discloses that a glass shell member is used to cover the heat-resistant film material. In the electric heating body, however, the heat-resistant film material on the outer circumferential face of the electric resistance element is bonded to the electric resistance element through the molten heat-resistant film material when it is attached to the electric resistance element. Thus, the heat-resistant film material is not easily detached from the electric resistance element, and the heat-resistant film material is not easily replaced with new one. U.S. Pat. No. 4,166,813 further discloses that a cylindrical cap member is used to cover the end face of

It's not that you're breaking the law. But if you simply misuse a knife on it and the helicopter escorts you, you'll probably be more popular with your colleagues. In an office where the knives are stored on top of the refrigerator, the sight of a knife on the floor can be a nightmare. Imagine a "factory supervisor" who mysteriously drops a knife and has to run back to the factory with a cut. Employee knives that are lost must be replaced. But with some degree of care, a badly dropped knife can be re-secured. The teamster hotel that's open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, serves as a base camp. The hotel staff will clean the knife, sterilize the blade and re-attach it to the knife belt of the employee who left it on the floor. There are also instances when a knife is cut, but the damage can be repaired. In that case, the blade is lacerated and will have to be replaced. When the knife has to be destroyed, the supervisor will direct the staff to pick up the blade, pack it and take it out to the back field with a bulldozer. The blade will be burned in the incinerator. It is rare that someone will be permanently fired for missing a knife. But a regular occurrence is that a knife-finding employee ends up on the evening scrap list. The toolbox There are certain qualities that make a good tool. A knife with a straight edge is superior to a knife with serrated teeth; a more heavy-duty model is better than a lightweight one. No toolbox contains a boot knife; a boot knife has its own case. The pickaxe This is the most important tool in the toolbox. This is also the one that has the most uses. The exact qualities that make one tool good do not necessarily make another good. Flanged tools for earthmoving do not necessarily have less of an edge than helical-cut blades. Good circular saws do not necessarily have to be all around the subject matter. The discriminating eye of the worker must discern between what's good for his job and what's good for the overall performance of the equipment. The
